Once upon a time there was a village named vishnupuram in that Village they lived a man Winan was very innocent he was a pure man he never sinned and hurted anybody all he did was to help people and do lot of charitable works for poor and needy his son pitambaram was very good person his son pitambaram had two children pitambaram was also same like his father he would really help poor unneedy people and do lot of charitable works one day there was very deadly disease that took over entire Village so many people died out of this disease it was very harmful pitambara's wife and his daughter died from that disease and when pitambaram got sick he became very skinny and lost a lot of weight pitambaram then decided that he only had one child to look after and he had to make a living for his son and his father he then decided to work as a labor and make some money for his family at that time vinayan looks at his son and he says this with concern my son you look very real how would you be able to work as a labor in this condition that you are in let me go and beg for some rice and bring it back here for all of us even after hearing what his father said pitambaram doesn't listen and he says this I'm still alive father you need not beg for anything as long as I'm here just now they have started asking for people to work in the fields let me go there and get the job myself then left for the fields to work since he was so ill and weak none of the people in the fields considered to give him a job he was so weak that he was not able to hold the equipments required for the work he then roamed around the fields till evening he thought how could I work with this weakness and then he went back to the Village coming into the village he then begged to each and every house for some rice after getting some rice from people he went back to Home by night as soon as his father vinian looked at him he said this didn't I already tell you about the sun nobody will give you a job in this condition that you are in tomorrow we shall both go and beg for some rice father please do not think so negatively today we shall have what I have brought in tomorrow I will bring some good food for you all are you crazy my son we barely have enough for all of us to survive and where are you going to find a good food for all of us when pitambaram was ill his father brought in food by begging in the streets of Village pitambaram did not like this incident and since pitampuram could only get a job after he had regained his strength even he did not know what to do he started thinking about doing illegal activities to make money even though he had never done anything wrong in his entire life at the same time his father also suspected that pitambaram would do something wrong to bring in food into house because of this that night vinayan wasn't able to sleep at all he then woke up at the middle of the night to see what is happening and he left the house he saw his son is not there he waited for one hour he then hears a sound from outside the house without making a noise he slowly went outside and he saw his own son pitambaram chopping up and butchering a goat he then thought of himself oh God my son who has never done anything wrong in his life is now doing a very heinous frame why God have you put me in this situation where I don't even know whether I should condemn my son for what he is doing as I know the reason he is doing it to put food in the belly of his son and mine what should I do Lord vene then went back to the house and slept he kept thinking about what his son did and he couldn't sleep at all he didn't realize that his son was doing that so he could not starve to death vinayan was thinking about the punishment that his son would receive for doing such a terrible act his son took all the meat and then he butchered and put it on the top of the farm and he went to house and he cleaned himself and went to bed and slept the next day morning vinayan woke up and looked at his son and he said this to his son pitambaram come son let us both go and bake for some food we should go as early as possible that will be helpful for us very not need to beg for food further didn't I tell you yesterday that I would give you good food today today we shall have some meat for all of us where was this meat yesterday when we were starving for food how did it come to you all of a sudden I would rather die than eat food in an illegal manner I want you to look me in the eye and promise me right now that you would never do such terrible acts just for food this is absolutely wrong you should never do it please do not talk about begging to me for today today we shall eat the meat that I have brought and we shall eat it tomorrow as well by the time it is day after tomorrow I will have regained my strength and I shall go and get some work until then please do not talk about begging to me further after listening to what Sun said Binion could not control his anger anymore he looked at his son with angry and said this to him do not try to fool me you idiot you took the goat from our neighbor's house and you are butchering at last night yesterday you slept with me Andy woke up so late from where did you get this meat I saw the whole thing with my own eyes when I went to see where you are and now you are trying to tell me that you had bought this from somewhere you are a liar after listening to what his father said pitamram starts crying heavily I'm sorry Father I should have never stole that goat from our neighbor's house if you feel guilty about this we do not need to eat that meat let us both go and beg for food in the village bennion felt very bad when his son spoke to him on that way but at that time the damage has already been done because of two gods were listening to this conversation from outside the house gods in the ravi's farm informed him that goods are missing in the farm Ravi went to leader of village and he told him like this sir somebody had stolen a quote from my form I beg you to please find who stolen my goat and bring it back to me immediately the leader of the village has assigned a few Gods to search around the area nearby the farm of Ravi so they can find who had stolen the goat at that moment few Gods few Gods walked across Winans house and they heard the conversation that they had after listening to the conversation the gods went to the place where pitambaram had hidden the meat but Gods couldn't find the meat anywhere at all but they were sure that pitambaram only stole that they were very sure that because his father himself told that after the guards caught pitambaram as we know Ravi has no mercy at all he was very cruel and cunning he found out the news from the gods Ravi went to the leader and he said like this I'm so glad that you had caught the thief who stole my goat I want you to punish him immediately give him a very severe punishment so that this man will never forget to do anything like this ever again we do not need any witness whatsoever his father his own witness since his father is a very innocent and pure man we do not need any witness for this then the gods took all the evidence that they have collected from vinayan's house and farm that they had after that they went to this city judge the judge was very merciful and a kind man after listening to the case he felt very sad for pitambaram we live in a very sad situation where people are stealing not for money and greed but they are stealing for food I feel bad for pitambaram as he has all the evidence stacked against him and the person that is persecuting him also wants him to be punished severely has his own father is a witness to the entire incident I am not sure what to do because I don't want to punish this boy so severely as he has already looks like he is starving I do not want to punish a very innocent and kind family just because they were striving for food I will not agree to your sympathy and your mercy you're a judge and it is your duty to give the fat punishment to criminals the judge entered the hall and he saw everyone that was related to the case in the place the prosecutors mentioned the crime that they had occurred to them and guards had told everything that they had heard from vinen's house the guards told that they had found a bag of meat on top of Winans Farm most important Witnesses his own father the most important witness is his own father so what are you waiting for just start your testimony Ravi says this with arrogant smile in his face I want you to tell me everything that your son did and you have to promise that what you are telling is truth judge looks at vinayan and says that sir I beg you to spare my son my son since the time he was born he has never uttered a single bad word or done a bad thing in his entire life due to starvation poverty and debt we had no choice but to steal some food so that we can survive on top of that his wife and his eldest daughter had died due to the illness that had stuck our entire Village this had broken him and his heart into several pieces which is why he did what he could make him to his son unto me to survive we only caught the goat but we did not eat it at all what we did to the goat we had kept it on the top of our farm I did not see my son steal it and I also saw my son butcher it please do not punish him anymore I beg you sir please give him another chance he has promised me that he will not steal any more sir we shall never do this again sir the old man says the swatias in his eyes but Ravi started smiling and looks at the judge the entire room including the judges and guards looked at Ravi with a disgust and anger at that moment judge thinks this for a while and he says like this to Ravi there is not sufficient evidence to prove that pitambaram was the man that stole the goat do you have any more evidence to prove your case after listening to what judge said Ravi becomes angry and says like this didn't you heard this testimony that his father gave what else witness do you need for this how I am supposed to know that the goat that was butchered was yours do you have any identifying features to claim that it is your goat where is the goat's skin so far there is no evidence that the goat that was butchered was yours someone else could have stolen you a goat no the goat that you claim to be yours could have run away Ravi was shocked to hear what judge said Ravi then looked at his workers his workers then looked at the guards in a helpless manner Ravi said to judge like this we tried to find the skin wherever we could but we were unable to find the skin I'm pretty sure he is the man that stole my code we cannot do that unless and until you find me with that skin and proved to me that it is your goat I cannot punish bitambaram in any shape or form pitambaram and his father are allowed to eat the meat as much as they want to and they will not be punished whatsoever both pitambaram and his father is allowed to leave right now both pitambaram and his father folded their hands towards the judge and they thank him for what he had done for them after pitambaram and his father left the judge looked at the guts and said this listen to me my gods if we need to find Justice for Rabbi we need to make sure that you have to find the skin of that goat so please make sure you go and search everywhere after listening to what the judge said everybody in the court left Ravi couldn't do anything he has to accept it and go after everybody left judge told his helper like this thank you so much for the idea that you have given me if you did not hide the skin of the goat I would have been forced to punish pitambaram for stealing the goat and I wouldn't have been able to live with myself for the rest of my life knowing that I had punished a man for quenching his hunger thank you so much for your idea even though pitambaram was the man that had stolen the goat that day it is fair that he did only because of the situation around him he had truly never stolen or done anything bad in his entire life before that even though he was at the brink of death due to starvation his own father was able to tell the truth and not cause any harm to Justice what had transpired today was not right for justice but was right for Dharma the decision that we made today was correct judge then alerted a guards to visit pitambaram house every month and provide them with groceries and food items pitambaram also got a job due to the help of Judge and since that day onwards they have never starved for food ever in their life pitambaram and his family lived happily if you like this story do like it share it for more news stories please subscribe our new stories book English YouTube channel [Music] thank you [Music]

TOTAL SUMMARY (Model)

Pitambaram's wife and daughter died from a deadly disease. Pitambaram lost a lot of weight and decided to work as a labor and make some money for his family. Pitambaram butchered a goat and put it on the top of the farm.

Summary (From chatGPT)

In the village of Vishnupuram, there lived a man named Winan, known for his innocence and generosity. His son, Pitambaram, followed in his father's compassionate footsteps, always helping the less fortunate. When a deadly disease struck the village, Pitambaram's wife and daughter fell victim to it, leaving him to care for his father and one surviving child. Desperate to provide for his family, Pitambaram tried to work as a laborer but was too weak to secure employment. Frustrated, he considered resorting to illegal activities for money. His father, Winan, worried for his son's well-being, offered to beg for food. Still, Pitambaram insisted on finding a job to support his family. However, in his weakened state, he couldn't secure work and wandered the fields aimlessly. Eventually, he returned home empty-handed, only to be met with his father's concern. They argued, with Winan insisting on begging for food. Pitambaram refused, determined to provide for his family legally. That night, he stole a goat from their neighbor's farm and butchered it to feed his family. His father, Winan, discovered the truth but, torn by the circumstances, couldn't decide whether to condemn his son. Meanwhile, the neighbor, Ravi, realized his goat was missing and reported the theft to the village leader. Guards were dispatched to investigate. They overheard Pitambaram and Winan's conversation and went to inspect the meat Pitambaram had hidden. They couldn't find it but were convinced Pitambaram was the thief. Ravi, eager for revenge, pressed the leader to punish Pitambaram severely, claiming his father's testimony was enough. The case was brought to a kind-hearted judge, who sympathized with Pitambaram's dire situation and didn't want to punish him harshly. Winan testified to his son's innocence, explaining the family's desperate circumstances and their intention not to eat the stolen meat. Despite Ravi's demands, the judge found insufficient evidence to prove the goat was Ravi's. He asked for identifying features or the goat's skin, which Ravi couldn't provide. In the end, Pitambaram and Winan were allowed to leave without punishment, and they thanked the judge for his compassion. The judge instructed the guards to find the goat's skin, ensuring a fair judgment. Pitambaram eventually found a job with the judge's help, and they never starved again. The judge's decision upheld justice and Dharma (righteousness), acknowledging that Pitambaram's actions were a result of dire circumstances rather than malicious intent. Guards were tasked with visiting their home monthly to provide them with groceries, ensuring they lived a happy, well-fed life.

[Music] meetings matter meetings truly matter meetings done bran can have tremendous cost to organizations tremendous cost to individuals in terms of frustration and even something called meeting recovery syndrome which is the idea that when we have a bad meeting we just don't shed it it sticks with us and sometimes we need to ruminate with others to try to get it off of ourselves but meetings done right are incredible opportunities for organizations in terms of return on investment innovation employee engagement all kinds of positive outcomes so who is responsible for meeting improvement yes I can see by the show of hands you recognize that each of us plays a critical role in making meetings better but also so does the organization through the systems it has in place so let me speak to you a little bit about good organizational practices around meetings so now what I want to do is share with you my top ten evidence-based strategies for making meetings better number one it starts with mindset those leaders who truly have a steward mindset those leaders who recognize that as a leader of a meeting you are a steward of other's time those leaders do things differently once you have that self perception that your steward you start to think carefully about the meeting whether the meeting should even occur the types of approaches you want to do to address that meeting and by having that mindset you recognize that your job is to facilitate a meaningful experience your job is to make sure voices are heard your job is to make sure ideas are brought together and even at times have positive and constructive conflict around thoughts and effectiveness so that's the most important piece of advice second go for the smallest number of people possible we know that as meeting size increases in effectiveness also increases third go for the shortest time reasonable given the goals of the meeting and then even back it off a little bit we know from research that human performance gets better with a little bit of pressure so we need to think carefully given the agenda of the meeting how much time is needed let's not just default to an hour because after all where does that hour come from it's just a default standard on most calendar programs so let's think more carefully about it after all we know Parkinson's law to be a truism and Parkinson's law is this idea that time expands to whatever space is allotted to it so if you schedule a meeting for an hour lo and behold it's going to take an hour so we can use that to our advantage right we could decrease meeting lengths strategically add a little bit of pressure and then be able to return extra time back to individuals and number four don't be afraid to be unconventional at times good leaders evaluate their meetings periodically we know from earlier in this presentation that research shows that leaders have a blind spot well given that this blind spot exists then it's our responsibility to try to check our thinking to see whether our perceptions of meetings are aligned with everyone else's and simple survey done through survey monkey or Qualtrics when you ask people of your regularly scheduled meetings what they think is going well what's not going so well and ideas for improvement could be an incredible mechanism for creating that alignment between what you perceive and what others perceive so you take this and put it all together we don't want to eliminate meetings what we want to eliminate is bad meetings meetings done right can do so many amazing things for leaders and for organizations and each of us while we can't control other people's meetings we can control our own meetings we can make choices we can be exemplars and be the example for others and what's exciting is given how many meetings there are millions each day that even if we make just 20% of our meetings 20% better the cascading positive impact is tremendous at this point I want to thank you you've been a fantastic audience if you i want to hear more about the surprising science of meetings or my book or if you want to reach out with any questions I'm very happy to answer them. Thank you again.

TOTAL SUMMARY (Model)

Meeting recovery syndrome is the idea that when we have a bad meeting we just don't shed it. Each of us plays a critical role in making meetings better. He shares his top ten evidence-based strategies for making meetings better.

Summary (From chatGPT)

The speaker emphasizes the importance of effective meetings and their impact on organizations and individuals. Bad meetings can have significant costs, including frustration and "meeting recovery syndrome." However, well-structured meetings offer opportunities for return on investment, innovation, and employee engagement. Responsibility for meeting improvement lies with both individuals and organizations. The speaker discusses ten evidence-based strategies for making meetings better:

1. Adopt a steward mindset as a meeting leader, focusing on facilitating a meaningful experience and ensuring voices are heard.
2. Keep the meeting size as small as possible for increased effectiveness.
3. Make meetings as short as reasonably necessary, recognizing that human performance often improves with a bit of time pressure.
4. Embrace unconventional approaches when appropriate to enhance meeting outcomes.
5. Regularly evaluate meetings to identify what's working well, what isn't, and ideas for improvement, aligning perceptions with participants.

The goal is not to eliminate meetings but to eliminate bad meetings. Making even a fraction of meetings more effective can have a significant positive impact on organizations and individuals.

Subject: Quarterly Business Review and Upcoming Initiatives

Dear Team,

I hope this email finds you well. As we approach the end of the current quarter, it's an excellent time to reflect on our achievements and discuss the exciting initiatives that lie ahead. Our Quarterly Business Review (QBR) meeting is scheduled for next week, and I want to provide you with some insights and updates in preparation for this crucial discussion.

Review of Q3 Achievements: Over the past three months, we've achieved some remarkable milestones as a team. Our sales team exceeded its targets, closing several key deals with major clients. I want to acknowledge and express my gratitude to all of you for your hard work and dedication. Your commitment to excellence is evident in these outstanding results. Our product development team has been equally impressive. We successfully launched two new products and received positive feedback from early adopters. These achievements reflect our commitment to innovation and customer satisfaction.

Financial Performance: I'm pleased to report that our financial performance for Q3 has been strong. Our revenue increased by 15% compared to the previous quarter, and our profit margins improved as well. This growth is a testament to your efforts and our collective commitment to our goals.

Upcoming Initiatives:

Looking forward, we have several exciting initiatives on the horizon:

- 1. New Market Expansion: We are actively exploring opportunities to expand into new markets, both domestically and internationally. Our market research team has identified potential areas for growth, and we will discuss our strategy in more detail during the QBR.
- 2. Product Enhancement: Building on the success of our recent product launches, we will focus on further enhancing our existing products based on customer feedback. This includes rolling out new features and improvements to ensure our offerings remain competitive.
- 3. Employee Development: Investing in our team's growth and development remains a top priority. We will be introducing additional training programs and mentorship opportunities to help our employees reach their full potential.
- 4. Sustainability Initiatives: As part of our commitment to corporate social responsibility, we will be launching sustainability initiatives aimed at reducing our environmental footprint. This includes initiatives to reduce waste, promote energy efficiency, and support charitable causes aligned with our values.

QBR Agenda: Our BR meeting is scheduled for next Tuesday at 10:00 AM. Please find attached the detailed agenda, which includes presentations from each department highlighting achievements, challenges, and plans for the upcoming quarter. I encourage everyone to come prepared with questions and suggestions to make this meeting as productive as possible.

Open Door Policy: In addition to the QBR, I want to remind you that my door is always open for any concerns, suggestions, or feedback you may have. Your input is invaluable as we navigate these exciting times of growth and change.

Thank you once again for your dedication and hard work. I look forward to our QBR meeting and the opportunity to collaborate on these exciting initiatives.

Best regards,

TOTAL SUMMARY (Model)

As we approach the end of the current quarter, it's an excellent time to reflect on our achievements and discuss the exciting initiatives that lie ahead. Over the past three months, we've achieved some remarkable milestones as a team. Our revenue increased by 15% compared to the previous quarter. We are exploring opportunities to expand into new markets, both domestically and internationally. As part of our commitment to corporate social responsibility, we will be launching initiatives aimed at reducing our environmental footprint.

Summary (From chatGPT)

The email discusses the upcoming Quarterly Business Review (QBR) meeting and provides an overview of achievements in the current quarter:

Q3 Achievements: Acknowledges the team's outstanding performance, particularly in sales and product development.

Financial Performance: Reports a 15% revenue increase and improved profit margins.

Upcoming Initiatives: Highlights future plans, including new market expansion, product enhancement, employee development, and sustainability initiatives.

QBR Agenda: Shares details about the QBR meeting agenda and encourages active participation.

Open Door Policy: Reminds employees of an open-door policy for feedback and concerns.

The email emphasizes gratitude for the team's hard work and dedication and expresses optimism about the company's future.

"[Narrator] The story of writing, astronomy, and law. The story of civilization itself begins in one place. Not Egypt, not Greece, not Rome. But Mesopotamia. Mesopotamia is an exceedingly fertile plain situated between the Tigris and the Euphrates Rivers. For five millennia, the small strip of land situated in what is today Iraq, Kuwait and Syria fostered innovations that would change the world forever. Inhabited for nearly 12,000 years, Mesopotamia's stable climate, rich soil and steady supply of fresh water made it ideal for agriculture to develop and thrive. About 6,000 years ago, seemingly overnight, some of these agricultural settlements blossomed into some of the world's first cities. In the period between 4,000 and 3,100 BC, Mesopotamia was dotted with a constellation of competing city states. At one point, they were unified under the Akkadian Empire and then broke apart forming the empires of Assyria and Babylon. Despite near constant warfare, innovation and development thrived in ancient Mesopotamia. They built on a monumental scale from palaces to ziggurats, mammoth temples served as ritual locations to commune with the gods. They also developed advanced mathematics, including a base 60 system that created a 60-second minute, a 60-minute hour and a 360-degree circular angle. The Babylonians used their sophisticated system of mathematics to map and study the sky. They divided one earth year into 12 periods. Each was named after the most prominent constellations in the heavens, a tradition later adopted by the Greeks to create the zodiac. They also divided the week into seven days, among each after their seven gods embodied by the seven observable planets in the sky. But perhaps the most impactful innovation to come out of Mesopotamia is literacy. What began as simple pictures scrawled onto wet clay to keep track of goods and wealth developed into a sophisticated writing system by the year 3,200 BC. This writing system would come to be called cuneiform in modern times and proved so flexible that over the span of 3,000 years, it would be adapted for over a dozen different major languages and countless uses including recording the law of the Babylonian king Hammurabi, which formed the basis of a standardized justice system. But Mesopotamia's success became its undoing. Babylon in particular proved too rich a state to resist outside envy. In 539 BC, the Persian king Cyrus conquered Babylon and sealed his control over the entirety of Mesopotamia. For centuries, this area became a territory of foreign empires. Eventually, Mesopotamia would fade like its kings into the mists of history. And its cities would sink beneath the sands of Iraq. But its ideas would prevail in literacy, law, math, astronomy and the gift of civilization itself."

"Introduction to the three branches laughs three branches of government what does a tree in the United States government have in common if you said they both have branches you are right today we are going to learn about the Reasons why the government has branches three branches of the United States government and how they work when you look at a tree you see branches that attach to its trunk without its branches the tree looks pretty silly the branches of a tree make it a healthy plant and all the branches are important like a tree the government has branches three to be exact these three branches work together to equally contribute to the well-being of its citizens the three branches of government include the executive the legislative and the judicial each branch has a special unique role established by the United States Constitution to separate Government powers this separation is called a system of checks and balances what does that mean well it means that the government's power is shared by each branch and each branch has some power to check or stop actions by the other branches the goal is to balance each branch preventing any one branch from becoming too powerful or controlling pretty neat right let's talk more about Executive branch and the president each branch of government and what they do first up is the executive branch this Branch includes the president of the United States the vice president and the cabinet which is a group of people who give advice to the president the president is the leader of the country they are elected by the entire country to a four-year term and can only serve two terms or eight years total the President also approves and carries out laws passed by the legislative branch and can also veto or refuse certain laws they also negotiate treaties or agreements with other countries and act as a commander-in-chief of the Armed Forces the vice president is the second highest Executive Office of the U.S government and is the chief Deputy to the president of the United States here is an interesting fact the vice president is also the president of the Senate the cabinet is a group of chosen experts that advise the president here is a list of all cabinet positions Legislative branch and the Senate there are a lot of positions on the cabinet to keep the government running in many different areas now let's move on to the legislative branch the legislative branch is made up of two houses of Congress the Senate and the House of Representatives Congress is where laws are written discussed and voted on the Senate is made up of 100 Senators two from each state who are elected by the citizens of the state Senators each serve for six-year terms with no limit to how many terms they can serve as we mentioned before the vice president is the head of the Senate the Senate approves Presidential nominations to the cabinet meaning that they have a The House of Representatives say in who the president picks for certain jobs the House of Representatives is the other part of Congress it is made up of 435 Representatives this number is based on a state's population for instance the state of California has 53 Representatives while the states of Delaware and Vermont only have one each that is because the population of California is much bigger than the population of Delaware and Vermont members of the House are elected by its citizens and serve two-year terms like the Senate there is no term limit for Representatives a speaker of the house is elected by the members of the House of Representatives to serve as its leader the Senate and the House of Representatives must both vote for and ratify a bill for it to become law they may also override presidential vetoes if they have a large enough majority remember checks and balances this is one Judicial branch and the Supreme Court way that the legislative branch can balance the Executive Branch if needed the third branch of government is the judicial branch the nine members of the Supreme Court of the United States oversee the U.S court system the Supreme Court is made up of eight judges or justices plus one chief justice all members are nominated by the president of the United States and approved by the Senate look at those checks and balances working positions on the Supreme Court are for life meaning there are no term limits the court explains the meaning of the Constitution and laws it determines whether something is constitutional or unconstitutional the Supreme Court also decides which court cases to review and often decides new ways of interpreting the law it also settles court cases between two or more States it is pretty neat to see how all three of these equally important branches work Review of the facts together to create a fully functioning power regulated government now that you know more about the three branches of government let's review all you have to do is guess which branch of government matches up with which job ready let's go president of the United States executive branch the Supreme Court of the United States judicial branch the cabinet executive branch the House of Representatives legislative branch the federal court judicial branch great job government Geniuses the United States government has three branches to ensure that power is shared equally among them and that the rights of its people are upheld maybe one day you will be a part of the executive legislative or judicial branches and help to maintain this balance and affect positive change hope you had fun learning with us visit us at learnbrite.org for thousands of free resources and TurnKey solutions for teachers and homeschoolers "

SUMMARY [2]

The three branches of government are the executive, the legislative and the judicial. The executive branch includes the president, the vice president and the cabinet. The legislative branch is made up of two houses of Congress: the Senate and the House of Representatives. The judicial branch is the executive branch of the federal court.

"welcome back citizens Caroline here you might already know that the House of Representatives one part of Congress has 435 members but did you know that the original Plan called for one representative for every 30 000 people it's true that means that in the US today we would have a House of Representatives with something like 11 000 members crazy huh there's lots more info coming your way today as we take an in-depth look at the U.S House of Representatives thank you Objectives our objectives today are to describe the terms of office for U.S representatives list and describe the requirements of the job and explain the process by which representatives are elected you may want to print out the guided notes now if you haven't done so already the first objective is easy to cover representatives are elected for two-year terms that means they serve two years then must be re-elected to stay in office an interesting fact about the U.S House of Representatives is this the entire membership of 435 people is elected every two years that means that every other year every person in one of America's most important jobs could be replaced it's important to note too that the house has no term limits that means a representative can be re-elected over and over and over again that's exactly what John Dingle did a Democrat from Michigan Dingle served over 59 years in the house from 1955 until he retired in January 2015. Requirements the requirements to be a U.S representative are outlined clearly in the Constitution and there are only three first a member of the House must be at least 25 years old that's not far away for you a representative must reside in the state they are elected to represent imagine electing someone who is not a resident of a state how would they know the wants and needs of the people they represent and with a representative really have their best interests at heart the third requirement is that a representative must have been a U.S citizen for at least seven years this is to ensure loyalty to the U.S keep in mind that only two jobs in the US government require that the individual is born a U.S citizen you might be able to figure that one out Population you've already heard that the original plan for the house was to provide a representative for every 30 000 people early in our nation's history it became apparent that doing so would quickly become a problem however it is still based on population the United States conducts a census every 10 years to count those living in the U.S and once the results are in the house recalibrates its membership every state is guaranteed at least one representative in fact there are six states that have only one they are Alaska Delaware North Dakota South Dakota Vermont and Wyoming as you might guess those are the least populated states in fact as of 2022 there are only six states with fewer than one million residents since representation is based on population the states with the most people also have the most votes in Congress as of 2022 those states were California with 52 Representatives Texas with 38 Florida with 28 and New York with 26. no other state has more than 17. an interesting fact is that some less populated states actually have more Representatives per capita than a state with a lot of people for example Wyoming has only one representative but that individual serves 578 000 people in contrast New York's 26 Representatives serve an average of more than 777 000 citizens so if a New Yorker moved to Wyoming his vote would effectively have more influence on Congress than in his previous state interesting huh hmm Districts unlike Senators who represent an entire State a U.S representative is elected to speak for district within a state unless we're talking about the six states with only one representative of course this map of Kansas is one example for another take a look at this map of congressional districts in Oregon one representative speaks for a large Geographic portion of the state as you can see in green meanwhile most of the population lives close to the Pacific coast in cities such as Portland and the congressional districts are smaller voters within each district elect a representative who then speaks for them in the Capitol building in Washington DC only voters within that congressional district can vote for that representative Duties the House of Representatives does have some specific duties separate from the senate for example the house impeaches government officials such as the president what that means is that Representatives determine whether enough evidence of wrongdoing is present for there to be a trial if so the Senate handles the actual trial also all bills for raising revenues such as taxes originate in the House of Representatives still the House of Representatives is sometimes referred to as the lower house It generally has less Prestige partly because of the two-year term or perhaps due to time restrictions on speaking many who one day served as president began their careers in the House of Representatives and remembered you can serve in the house as young as 25 years old maybe you'll want to consider running yourself in just a few years remember to complete the activities in the PDF vote debate and participate and remember to always be clever"

SUMMARY [3]:

The House of Representatives, one part of Congress, has 435 members. They are elected for two-year terms and re-elected every two years. A representative must be 25 years old and a U.S citizen for at least seven years. There are six states that have only one representative in fact as of 2022 there are only six states with fewer than one million residents. The states with the most votes in Congress are California with 52, Texas with 38, Florida with 28 and New York with 26.

"BIGBANG is a term used in cosmology to describe the theoretical event that marked the beginning of the universe as we know it. It's not an explosion in the conventional sense, but rather a moment of rapid expansion and the birth of the universe. Let's break down what BIGBANG is, why it happens, and what might happen next: What is BIGBANG? The Big Bang is a scientific theory that suggests the universe began as a singularity, an extremely hot and dense point, approximately 13.8 billion years ago. This singularity suddenly began to expand, leading to the formation of the universe. It wasn't an explosion in space; rather, it was the sudden expansion of space itself. The Big Bang Theory is supported by a wide range of observational and theoretical evidence, including the cosmic microwave background radiation and the abundance of light elements in the universe. Why it happens: The exact cause or trigger of the Big Bang is not fully understood. It's a fundamental mystery in cosmology. However, several theories attempt to explain its origins: Quantum Fluctuations: Some theories propose that quantum fluctuations in a pre-existing state of nothingness might have led to the creation of the singularity. Inflation Theory: This theory suggests that a period of rapid expansion called cosmic inflation preceded the Big Bang. During inflation, the universe expanded exponentially, smoothing out irregularities and setting the stage for the subsequent Big Bang. Multiverse Hypothesis: Some cosmologists speculate that our universe is just one of many in a multiverse, and the Big Bang might have been a natural consequence of the dynamics of this larger multiverse. What will happen next? The future of the universe is a topic of ongoing research and debate among cosmologists. Several scenarios are proposed: Heat Death (The Big Freeze): One possibility is that the expansion of the universe will continue indefinitely. As it expands, matter and energy become more diluted, leading to a gradual cooling and darkening of the universe. In this scenario, the universe would eventually reach a state of maximum entropy, known as heat death, where no more work can be done. Big Crunch: In some scenarios, the expansion of the universe could reverse, causing a contraction known as the Big Crunch. This would result in the universe collapsing back into a hot, dense state. Big Rip: Another possibility is the Big Rip, where the universe's expansion accelerates to the point where it tears apart galaxies, stars, planets, and even atoms. Steady State: Some theories propose a steady-state universe where new matter is continuously created to maintain a constant density. The fate of the universe depends on various factors, including the amount of dark matter and dark energy it contains. Current observations suggest that dark energy is driving the universe's accelerated expansion, making the \"heat death\" scenario more likely. However, our understanding of these phenomena is still evolving, and new discoveries may provide more insights into the future of the cosmos."
